

Publicity and Marketing Task

Each candidate is required to complete the publicity and marketing task listed below. Submissions must be original and created by you. Ensure your submission highlights your creativity, understanding of audience behavior, and ability to communicate and promote effectively.

Task:

- Ideate a 15–30 second reel concept introducing yourself using the latest trends, formats, or viral audio
- Suggest the trendiest songs/audio you would use and justify your choice
- Present the concept as if you are marketing a personal brand, focusing on storytelling and a strong hook
- Describe the flow, visuals, and pacing of the reel (how it starts, builds, and ends)
- Ensure your idea is engaging, relatable, and scroll-stopping
- Answer a few scenario-based questions on handling publicity situations (reach, engagement, promotion strategies)

Scenario 1

The club is hosting "Dev-Sprint 2026," a high-value 3-hour workshop featuring an industry lead from a top tech company. Because of a scheduling conflict, the university has confirmed No OD (On Duty) will be provided. The event overlaps with mandatory 3rd-year labs.

The Goal: You need to hit 150+ registrations and ensure a high "show-up" rate despite students being worried about their attendance record.

How would you convince students to skip class for our event if we can't provide them with OD (On Duty) attendance?

Scenario 2

You have a major event coming up, but the sponsorship team just announced a zero-budget for marketing. You can no longer afford professional printing for posters, paid ads, or physical goodies/food to attract a crowd.

The Question:

"How would you generate high event attendance using only zero-cost, viral marketing tactics and existing digital assets?"

Submission Guidelines:

Submit your response as a document or PDF clearly explaining your concept and ideas. Ensure your submission is well-structured and easy to understand. Incomplete or unclear submissions will not be considered.
